About the Center for Addiction and Behavioral Health Research (CABHR)

Based in the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Helen Bader School of Social Welfare, CABHR is a research center led by a group of core academic scientists with broad interests in addictions and behavioral health. CABHR conducts cutting edge epidemiological, intervention and clinical research on addictions and mental/behavioral health.

Introduction to Social Network Analysis

Devon D. Brewer, PhD, Director, Interdisciplinary Scientific Research and Affiliate Assistant Professor, University of Washington

This two-day workshop will cover the theory underlying social network analysis (SNA); applications of SNA in the social and behavioral sciences; procedures for collecting social network data, types of data collected, and summary indices employed in network analysis. On the second day, attendees will receive introductory-level hands-on training in the use of the UCINET software package for the analysis of social network data.

University-Community Partnerships to Prevent Delinquency and Youth Violence

Patrick Tolan, PhD, Professor and Director, Institute for Juvenile Research, University of Illinois at Chicago

This seminar will focus on the value and some promising methods for university-community partnerships to bring evidence-based practices to prevention delinquency and youth violence forward. The emphasis is on the specific and complimentary contributions the university and community can bring to this partnership, the importance of working toward an ongoing relationship, and its value for improving public safety. Prior pertinent research and examples will be highlighted.

Advanced Topics in Quantitative Methods for Researchers in the Social Sciences and Public Health

Shenyang Guo, PhD, Associate Professor, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

Dr. Guo will provide an overview of structural equation modeling (SEM), power analysis in SEM, sampling, research design and propensity score matching. The workshop will introduce participants to relevant statistical software and will be especially tailored for applied faculty, advanced graduate students, and researchers working in the social sciences and public health disciplines. He will employ examples drawn from his work as a leading methodologist and applied researcher in social work and child welfare.

This workshop has been made possible by the generous sponsorship of the UWM Graduate School.
